Icing on the cake

Great British Bake Off star Liam Charles with The Speaker and winners of King's Crescent Estate bake off competition

RESIDENTS from two of Hackney's largest estates mingled with their neighbours and enjoyed the fantastic activities on offer at community fun days. Over 600 people attended the Woodberry Down Fun Day on 16 June. The estate is seeing more than 5,500 new homes being built, alongside three new parks, two schools, a library and a children's centre. Residents at the King's Crescent Estate celebrated the completion of the initial phases of regeneration, on 9 June. The highlight was the resident bake off with Hackney's very own Great British Bake Off star

STOP BUS CUTS

THE future of key bus services in the borough is under threat, and the Council is calling on the Mayor of London and Transport for London (TfL) to review its decision to cut them.

The 277 currently runs from the Isle of Dogs to Highbury and Islington via Mile End, Victoria Park, Hackney Central and Dalston, but after 30 June services will terminate at Dalston Junction.

This decision is the latest in a series of changes and cuts to bus services in Hackney, with more in the pipeline.

The Council also understands that TfL is considering removing route 48, which runs from Walthamstow to London Bridge through Hackney and the City, but has had no communication on this from TfL.

Last month, the Council carried out a public consultation on the impact of bus cuts, completed by 1,600 people. A wide range of concerns were raised across the borough, particularly around the 277 bus route.

Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Feryal Demirci, said: "The 277 provides an important link to the Underground for thousands of residents, who will now have to change buses at Dalston or walk 25 minutes to continue their journey.

"TfL believes that passengers will be able to use the London Overground or alternative bus routes, but Mayor Glanville and I are worried that it will extend and delay the journeys for many of the borough's residents.

"We are concerned that the cut will lead to increased crowding on other routes that serve Highbury and Islington. The 277 often leaves Highbury and Islington full. The alternative bus route – 30 – comes from Marble Arch, and is often already busy by the time it gets to Highbury.

"As well as the shortening of the 277 route, there has been a reduction in the frequency on a number of bus routes in Hackney, meaning longer waits between buses. We recently asked residents to tell us about their experiences of these cuts, and how they would like bus services to be improved. The issue of the 277 came up, as it did when TfL consulted on the changes to Highbury Corner.

"A quarter of residents use buses as their main mode of transport – commuters rely on them to get to work, children rely on them to get to school, and others rely on them for everyday living.

"We understand the need to save money, but this cannot be at the detriment of vital services. On behalf of Hackney residents I am calling on the Mayor of London and TfL to review this decision and TfL's policy of cutting the bus services relied on by millions."

Award-winning programme offers more than 30 apprenticeships for local people

A variety of apprenticeships are available within different departments in Hackney Council. Above: design assistant apprentice Thaddaeus Brown; below: digital marketing apprentice La Braya Buffong

MORE than 30 apprenticeships for the Council's award-winning programme are now open to residents over the age of 16.

Last month, the apprenticeship programme won a national prize for school leaver employment in the public sector. The achievement, based on direct feedback by apprentices employed by the Council, was unveiled at the sixth annual School Leaver Awards.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "Our aim is to ensure that our apprentices have the skills, experience and qualifications to flourish in their roles and their careers thereafter."

The apprenticeship programme, which is designed to give people a chance to start their career within different Council departments, has a particular focus on ICT this year.

Other roles include youth work, plumbing, electrics, painting and decorating, public health, playwork, health and safety, and administration.

Apprenticeships allow residents to combine work with training, meaning they can earn up to £22,000 while they learn, and gain a nationally recognised qualification.

Digital marketing apprentice, La Braya Buffong, said: "I'm the only person who does this apprenticeship at Hackney and I'm the only woman on my course."

"I've learnt a lot about how to manoeuvre the digital world and I'm excited to see where I can go with it."

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and HR, said: "After the incredible success of last summer's apprenticeship programme, I am delighted that we are recruiting for a further round of apprentices."

"This year we are showcasing even more career options than we

“Our aim is to ensure that our apprentices have the skills, experience and qualifications to flourish” did last year, and are recruiting 18 apprentices to IT placements. I am particularly keen to encourage young women with an interest in a science, technology, engineering and maths to get in touch and submit an application."

"All of our apprentices over the age of 18 receive at least the London Living Wage because we want to make sure the scheme is accessible to local people, regardless of their financial situation."

Applicants need to be 16 and over and live or have been educated in Hackney, or have received support from the leaving care service. The closing date is 15 July.

FOUR Hackney women from very different fields have been made MBEs in the Queen's birthday honours this year.

Art gallery director Ingrid Swenson, construction industry campaigner Kath Moore, head of school Pat Quigley and fashion industry expert Laurian Davies were included in this month's honours list, which made history for featuring more women than men.

"It's particularly timely to be recognised in 2018 as we celebrate 100 years since the first women gained the vote in the UK," said Kath Moore, whose not-for-profit organisation Women Into Construction (WIC) campaigns for more diversity within the sector.

Kath trained as a carpenter and worked on building sites across London, where she was often the only woman.

In 2008, she was chosen to lead the Women's Project for London 2012 and tasked with increasing female representation in the construction of the Olympic Park. Under her stewardship, the number of women involved in the work more than doubled, and in 2014, the Women's Project became WIC, with Kath as managing director.

Laurian received her MBE for services to young fashion entrepreneurs and exporters. Now the UK Fashion and Textile Association's international business manager, the award recognises the nearly 40 years she has spent helping young designers.

She said: "I am surprised and delighted to have been awarded an MBE. It's wonderful to help young designers to find their place in our ever-changing industry."

Ingrid's MBE was awarded for services to the arts in East London, having spent two decades as director of the critically acclaimed PEER gallery in Hoxton.

She said: "I feel privileged to have been honoured with this MBE. I hope that the focus the recognition gives to this part of Hackney will enable PEER to collaborate even more ambitiously with our neighbours."

Pat, head of The Garden School, N16, was awarded an MBE for services to education.

Pat has been at The Garden school since it opened, prior to this she worked in Hackney in special education for nearly 40 years.

She said: "I am very touched that my contribution and commitment to special education in Hackney has been recognised. I have been overwhelmed by the number of parents and colleagues, past and present, who have been in touch to pass on their good wishes."

News in brief

Celebrating Romeo and Juliet

A MURAL has been made to commemorate the excavation of the historic The Theatre playhouse in Shoreditch, which is believed to be the location of the first performance of Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet'.

The mural features a colourful backdrop of Elizabethan-inspired flora, a quotation taken from the text of 'Romeo and Juliet', and the two star-crossed lovers.

The mural was made in collaboration with Global Street Art, an active group of artists from over 100 countries, which aims to paint across international cities.

An exhibition space showcasing the historical importance of the site is set to open next year.

The Theatre was one of the first Elizabethan playhouses to be built in London. During the 1590s it was home to the Lord Chamberlain's Men acting company which counted William Shakespeare as its leading playwright. Many of Shakespeare's early plays, like 'Romeo and Juliet', were likely premiered on its stage.

Call for railway arches rethink

THE Council is calling for a rethink over Network Rail's plans to sell-off the management of its railway arches to a private company.

The Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, has written to both the Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, and Transport Secretary Chris Grayling to raise concerns that many of the independent businesses within could face major rent hikes which they could not afford.

Mayor Glanville wrote: "Network Rail tenants in Hackney and across London are deeply worried about the future of their businesses. Their fear is that when Network Rail sells its commercial estate portfolio in one lot, as is currently the plan, this could lead to an even more aggressive implementation of rent increases."

Get ready to bike around the borough

UP TO 1,000 children will take to Hackney's streets by bike on 28 June as Bike Around the Borough returns for its eighth outing.

Over 40 schools are due to take part in the mass bike ride, which two years ago set the world record for the highest number of people cycling in a continuous 'bike bus'.

Children are set to gather at Hackney Downs, travelling from there to Clissold Park, where the bike bus will pick up more participants, before heading on to London Fields, past Hackney Town Hall and back to Hackney Downs.

Bike Around the Borough aims to promote cycling among the borough's children, giving them the chance to practise the skills they have learnt through national standards cycle training and to help them see how easy it is to travel around Hackney by bike.

After the ride takes place, there will be a summer cycling celebration open to the public at Hackney Downs with food, drink and cycling-themed activities at the park from 3.30-8.30pm.

Deputy Mayor, Feryal Demirci, said: "I can't wait to again join the hundreds of children discovering their borough by bike, who will be building on the training they've had in school and finding out that cycling is a fun, healthy way to get around."

The event will be sponsored by British

Cycling, the UK's governing body for cycling, alongside Volker Highways and Berkeley Homes.

A show for all of us

OVER 100 young people performed in a variety show at Hackney Empire, as part the capital's Pride celebrations.

The show called 'I Am Me' celebrated the borough's lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and intersex (LGBTQI+) community and featured spoken word, drama, songs and dance.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, who attended the event on 19 June, said: "It's only been 15 years since the repeal of Section 28, a damaging law that would have meant celebrating our LGBTQI+ community within schools and councils would have been illegal. I am proud to see how far we have come."

The variety show was staged by Hackney-based charity Educate &

Celebrate, in collaboration with The Urswick School, Hackney Museum and the Council's Hackney Pride 365 festival.

Educate & Celebrate was set up by ex-Stoke Newington teacher Dr Elly Barnes MBE, and works with academic institutions and businesses to make them LGBTQI+ friendly.

Elly said: "Young people's voices are key to creating institutional change from the get go, our work is about building cohesive communities and a generation where being LGBTQI+ is embedded and just part of everyday life."

"This is why showcases like tonight are absolutely vital for changing hearts and minds."

Martha Braggins, Deputy Head of The Urswick School, which has achieved an Educate & Celebrate gold award for LGBTQI+ inclusion, said: "It was a fantastic showcase."

Year 8 student Bruno Pereira added: "The night was full of emotional feeling and I really think it made people think about how we treat each other."

Council challenges Government over Hackney Today publication

THE Council has resolved to challenge the Government over its direction that it stops the fortnightly publication of Hackney Today.

The Cabinet voted on 18 June that, should the Secretary of State maintain the current direction that Hackney Today be published no more than four times a year, the Council will proceed to challenge the validity of the direction.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "Taking legal action is not something we do lightly. However, we believe that to restrict ourselves to quarterly publication would substantially damage our ability to communicate and engage with our residents, especially those who are hardest to reach, may face challenges around the digital divide and who often have most need of our services. "It is right that we should defend our right to engage with people in the ways that work best for our communities and in the most cost effective way for the Council and taxpayers." More information on the decision is available in the Cabinet report: is.gd/axbQr6

Repair and re-use day returns

RESIDENTS can help reduce waste and save money by having their broken electrical items fixed at the borough's annual Repair and Re-use Day, which takes place at London Fields on 7 July.

Hackney Fixers will be on hand to mend items, and people will also be able to donate unwanted goods and pick up something they need at the give-and-take stall.

Dr Bike will provide residents with free bicycle checks, and there will be textile workshops, led by Barley Massey from Fabrications, to help people repair clothes.

The North London Waste Authority waste prevention team will also be on hand to demonstrate how to prepare meals using food destined for the bin. The event will run between 11am and 3pm. Digital advisory panel to guide tech direction

A SERIES of events to celebrate London Tech Week and harness the digital expertise of residents, businesses and social enterprises were hosted by the Council earlier this month.

The week, which ran from 10 to 16 June, included a 'dementia-friendly' hackathon, pictured, where local technology professionals worked with carers to come up with three app ideas to help make the lives of those living with dementia easier.

The events, which were aimed at helping to shape the Council's digital direction also included the launch of the Mayor of Hackney's digital advisory panel.

Mayor Glanville said: "London Tech Week was a great opportunity to draw on this expertise to help shape the Council's digital direction. I launched the digital advisory panel so we can open up the work the Council is doing to improve its digital services."

RESIDENTS took advantage of the fabulous weather to enjoy food, music and dancing with their neighbours as the borough celebrated two fantastic fun days.

The Woodberry Down Fun Day, on 16 June, attracted over 600 visitors who were treated to a Caribbean barbecue, local dance groups House of Kahn and Exotic Mas, fairground games, a bucking bronco, and MC'ing from Mr Mojo.

A host of community groups also got involved, with cycling charity Cycle Confidence offering advice on cycle safety, Dr Bike helping to fix up residents' bikes, Hackney environmental group ecoACTIVE teaching about sustainability, and a raffle run by the Friends of Woodberry Down.

The event took place at Rowley Gardens – a fitting venue for an estate known for its abundance of parkland and wildlife.

More than 5,500 new, high-quality homes are being built onsite, alongside three new public parks, two schools, a library and a children's centre. The event was a chance for new residents to mix with long-term locals, and gave people the chance to quiz key partners in the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, who attended the event, said: “From the amazing transformation of the Woodberry Wetlands to the new homes that are giving long term residents a fantastic new place to live, we're seeing some exciting changes take place in Woodberry Down.

KING'S CRESCENT

Over at King's Crescent Estate on 9 June, more than 200 residents joined forces to celebrate the completion of the initial phases of regeneration.

Entertainment included fairground stalls, a rodeo sheep, face painting, sumo wrestling and music from Hackney-based steel band, Pantonic.

The icing on the cake for the event, however, was the resident bake off with Hackney's very own Great British Bake Off star Liam Charles in attendance.

Judged by The Speaker,

Cllr Clare Potter, who is a councillor for the area, and resident Patricia Simm, the title was awarded to Grace James for her lemon drizzle with vanilla and elderflower frosting cake.

Stiff competition was provided by Ewan Stone and his daughter Francis, three, with their chocolate and Guinness cake, as well as Annika Sampson Flamdoro, eight, with her carrot cake.

The Speaker said: "I am delighted that Liam was able to join us.

Being a local young man, we are very proud of his achievements and it meant a lot to the residents that he appreciated their culinary skills."

The dignitary chatted with residents and their families who have had streets named in their honour on the estate.

Mayor Glanville cut the ceremonial ribbon together with Richard Higgins, Chairman of the Higgins Group, the contractors for the regeneration of the estate.

The Mayor said: "Today marks another important milestone in the Council's ambitious estate regeneration programme.

"The award-winning initial phases of regeneration at King's Crescent are now complete, delivering 273 much needed new homes, with almost half of these for Council social rent or shared ownership for local people."

The Council's Estate Regeneration Project team and Architects KCA were also in attendance to display a model of the project and discuss the emerging designs for the next phase of regeneration for the estate.

1. Great British Bake Off star Liam Charles, far right, with The Speaker and winners of King's Crescent Estate bake-off competition; 2. Trying out the games; 3. Enjoying candy floss; 4. A spot of sumo wrestling; 9. Cycling safely; 10. Celebrating the day; 11. Reis exploring the play area; 12. Display model of the regeneration project; 13. They've got a street named after them; 14. PR  UD TO FOSTER

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

hackneypeople

By Harriet Worsley

ARTIST Paul Harfleet is regularly mistaken for a dead man. "I end up spending quite a lot of time lying on pavements in urban areas, and people worry I might be dead, or at least ill," he says.

In London this presents fewer difficulties: "People often just step over me," he explains. But last spring he was in Washington DC and Lawrence, Kansas. He has also lain on pavements across the UK and, in fact, the world – where people tend to be more concerned.

"Often people stop to check I'm OK, and then I have to make a call: is it safe to come out to them?" Paul says.

Because since 2005 Paul has been planting single pansies at the site of homophobic abuse, and then getting down low to the ground in order to photograph them.

Each photo is then added to a map on his website, with a name that reflects the abuse that took place there. Titles like 'Let's Kill The Batty Man' and 'Disgusting People Like You Aren't Welcome Here' create a disturbing picture of modern day prejudice.

As do their sheer number: Paul has planted over 300 pansies so far. He says: "I keep a spreadsheet of places to visit, to mark experiences people have told me about personally, or about which I've read in the media... I can't see the project coming to an end anytime soon."

Its beginning, however, is easier to pinpoint. Today, Paul lives just off Hackney Road, but in 2003 he was a young artist in Manchester.

"I had always been easily identifiable as gay," he explains. "Sometimes people would shout comments, or there would be violence. It would happen, and I would just try and forget about it."

Then one day, something changed. First, two builders shouted 'it's about time we went gay-bashing again isn't it?' Later, a gang hurled abuse and stones at Paul and his boyfriend.

Finally, recalls Paul: "A man called us both 'ladies' under his breath, and because it had happened three times in a single day, I mentioned it to friends. And I realised they were shocked. Other people didn't realise this was still a regular experience for many gay people."

In his art, Paul had already begun exploring ways of moving away from traditional painting and towards a more conceptual style. And this gave him an idea. What if he were to plant a flower at the sites of all the places he had experienced homophobic abuse during his life so far?

The pansy was an obvious choice because of its association with the gay community. But, says Paul: "I didn't really like the flower, they didn't look powerful to me."

“When [pansies] become associated with resistance to something like hate crime, they become powerful”

When he planted and photographed them in these locations, however, something changed: "When they become associated with resistance to something like a hate crime, they become powerful," he explains. "It was a simple and peaceful way of confronting homophobia."

And soon, the project began to develop a momentum of its own.

From documenting the places he himself had suffered abuse, Paul went on to mark the sites where others had suffered. In 2015, he took the Pansy Project to France, to make a documentary for the cable channel Canal+.

"Meeting the people who had suffered the abuse face to face, and planting the pansies with them, was... well, it was very moving," he says.

"After doing the documentary, I had a dream about a children's book," he continues. "The next morning, I woke up and started drawing."

The book, called 'Pansy Boy', charts the story of a gentle, imaginative schoolboy who is subjected to bullying before he comes up with a plan to reclaim his school through planting flowers.

"He's a lot like I was at his age," says Paul. "I knew I was gay from the very beginning, but I was desperate not to draw attention to myself."

"When I was 14, we moved from a small suburban town in Surrey, to Edinburgh."

The new boy, the English boy, and the gay boy all at once, Paul was subject to near constant abuse. Like the young hero of his book, he stuck to his dreams. And like him too, it was flowers that made those dreams come true.

Four years after he began writing his book, the Guardian wrote an article about him, mentioning that Paul was looking for a publisher.

"Martin Goodman read it and remembered seeing a pansy that I'd planted on the South Bank 10 years before. He got in touch and became my publisher," says Paul.

Now that the book is published, Paul tours schools as well as other major international venues.

"I've given workshops in primary schools in Peterborough and Skegness," he says, "and it's really touching how the children respond to it. It's not about being gay. I really hope that's not the most interesting thing about me, or what I do."

"I just want them to see that there's a place for everyone, whoever they are and whatever they do."

Field of dreams

The project will restore the landscape and historic buildings in Springfield Park

FUNDS of over £3.1million from the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) and Big Lottery Fund have been awarded to the Council for the restoration of Springfield Park.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, was presented with a cheque to restore the landscape and historic buildings within Springfield Park on 29 May.

Funding was initially granted last July and since then the Council has worked to prepare detailed documents such as construction drawings, specifications and contract documents for the project, and initial preparation works onsite too.

Before applying for funding, the Council asked park users for their thoughts on what improvements they would like to see and developed its plans in partnership with Springfield Park User Group.

The project includes refurbishing the park's buildings, which date back to the mid-19th century; upgrading the footpaths, play equipment and gates; and working to preserve and enhance the park's magnificent landscape.

Mayor Glanville said: "Springfield Park is an important part of Hackney's landscape and this will enable us to transform the park and its historic buildings into a haven for children and families.

"We are excited to see this area, already so rich with history and culture, be improved to its full potential."

Deputy Mayor, Feryal Demirci, added: "We're delighted to have received this support from the HLF and Big Lottery Fund.

"We are looking forward to protecting the character and integrity of this much-loved space for the next generation. The facilities will be a huge asset for the park and the local community."

News in brief

Council proposes to help halt decline of swifts in Hackney

A SET of proposals designed to help halt and reverse the decline of swifts in the borough due to habitat loss have been announced by the Council.

Swifts, which migrate between the UK and Africa, are a familiar sight in Hackney's skies from May to August. They are unique among birds in that they rely almost 100 per cent on the built environment for nesting space. As older buildings are renovated and newer buildings are totally sealed, available nesting sites for swifts to raise their young have fallen dramatically.

Across the UK, swifts declined by 51 per cent between 1995 and 2015. They are now officially classified as endangered in the UK.

In an attempt to combat and reverse the worrying decline of swifts in the borough, the Council will now take action in three key areas – through the planning process; through ensuring that permanent swift nests are built into all suitable new Council housing developments; and through identifying and creating a register of existing Council-owned housing and buildings where 'swift boxes' could be fitted retrospectively.

Swifts are a common sight in the borough during summer

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, said: "Across planning, housing supply, and our existing buildings we'll be seeking to halt and reverse the decline of these iconic birds. I'm proud that Hackney's approach to total sustainability is seeking to address this worrying fact where we can in our borough. We owe that to our children and the wildlife we share our world with."

Participating residents can nominate a charity for the cash

Charities reap benefit of recycling rewards

FIVE charities have been awarded a share of £7,500 after they were chosen by residents taking part in Hackney's Recycling Rewards Scheme.

The rewards scheme, which is run in partnership with Local Green Points, encourages participants to reduce waste, reuse and recycle and gain points by reporting what they have done.

Top earning members are rewarded with prizes every three months and all members get discounts in local shops.

Every six months residents participating in the scheme are able to nominate a charity out of a selection of five local community projects to receive a share of £7,500, with the charity with the most votes winning the biggest share.

This time, most residents voted for St Joseph's Hospice, which was awarded £3,500; followed by Hackney Migrant Centre, which received £2,000; Hackney Pirates, which received £1,000; St Mary's Secret Garden, which received £500; and Hackney Showroom, which received £500.

Hackney Recycling Rewards is free for residents and local businesses to join.

Outside In

Until 21 Jul, Well Hung Gallery, 239 Hoxton St, N1 5LG

THE streets of Hoxton have long hosted some of London's best graffiti. But now, that street art is coming in from the cold and on to the walls of a leading art gallery.

'Outside In' is the latest exhibition at Well Hung and it is bringing together the work of street artists like David Shillinglaw, Donk, Hannah Adamaszek and Zabou. These artists have been decorating the streets of London with a staggering quantity of creative works, from satirical and political imagery to colourful spray-painted murals. 'Outside In' brings them all together in a single and traditional gallery space, altering their context and, in doing so, provoking new questions about their value and meaning. However you feel about street art, seeing them this way is certainly less work for the legs.

Win tickets to the Great British Beer Festival!

NOW in its 41st year, CAMRA's Great British Beer Festival (GBBF) returns to London's Olympia this summer for five days of all things great and British in the world of beer. Run almost entirely by volunteers, GBBF will showcase more than 900 real ales, ciders, perries, wines and one-off speciality brews from independent breweries across the UK.

Not just about the beverage, guests can expect a host of entertainment such as rock, pop and alternative bands alongside auctions, traditional pub games and quizzes. While sipping on a carefully-crafted cold-one, tuck into some flavoursome street food, a range of tutored tasting sessions, and browse the book shop, where authors will be more than happy to sign and discuss their books with you. Whether you want to learn about beer and food pairings such as 'beer and cheese' or 'beer and chocolate', or if you have a non-alcoholic palette, there will be something for everyone aged 18 and over. The GBBF takes place from 7-11 August. For more info, visit: www.gbbf.org.uk

King In Concert

30 Jun and 1 Jul, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare St, E8 1EJ

THIS year marks 50 years since the assassination of Martin Luther King – not an anniversary that Hackney Empire was ever going to let slide by uncommemorated. Still, their concert version of a musical celebrating the great man's life is something special, even by their own high standards. Martin King's acclaimed musical 'King' in concert charts the love story between King and Coretta Scott, illustrating how the strength of their relationship drove the civil rights movement and ultimately changed the course of history. The show has not been performed for 30 years and, in reviving it, the Empire has pulled out all the stops. West End star Cedric Neal plays King and Sharon D Clarke his mother Alberta. Susie McKenna directs, the London Musical Theatre Orchestra plays live, and the Empire's own Community Choir supports them. The musical will be staged for two nights only. So you will have to be quick if you want to catch this ambitious show, worthy of King's own dreams. 'King' in concert is staged at the Hackney Empire on 30 June and 1 July. Children will be rewarded for every book they complete during the summer reading challenge, which is inspired by the iconic comic Beano

CHILDREN are being encouraged to get reading for this year's summer reading challenge – with a party thrown for those who complete the task.

The challenge, set by Hackney libraries, begins on 6 July: children need to read six books over the summer holidays. They can read any book of their choice and will be given rewards every time they complete a book.

For those who complete the challenge, a children's party will be held for them at their local library.

This year's theme will be 'Mischief Makers', inspired by the iconic comic Beano, which is celebrating its 80th anniversary.

Each book read will help children explore a map of Beano town to find the mysterious buried treasure and help them become ultimate mischief makers.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, said: "Not only does reading offer a lifetime of improved educational and employment chances, it also provides opportunities for imagination and escapism in an increasingly busy world.

"I'm delighted that the summer reading challenge gets children involved in reading and encourages them to discover the many resources and events at Hackney's libraries."

The challenge, which will run until 7 September, is open to children aged four to 11 and their families. Children who aren't already library members can join at one of the eight libraries in the borough.

Basketball champs meet MP

CLAPTON Girls' Academy, E5, slam-dunked their way to the national under-16 basketball title this month. They travelled to Manchester to win Basketball England's National Schools Championship, following victories in the London region qualifiers.

The Academy has been running a basketball programme for six years, organised by coach Fionnuala 'Fe' Duhaney-Keown and London-based charity Greenhouse Sports. Their success prompted a visit from Diane Abbott, MP for Hackney North and Stoke Newington.

Coach Fe said: "This is without a doubt the highlight of my coaching career. I have worked with some of these players since they were in primary school and I am immensely proud of them – both for the achievement but also for the people they have become."

Stage beckons for Haggerston

HAGGERSTON School, E2, has been selected to stage a new play at the National Theatre this summer. The school will perform 'The Sweetness of a Sting', written by Chinonyerem Odimba, at the 2018 Connections Festival.

The UK's largest youth theatre festival, which takes place from 26-30 June, is designed to celebrate new writing aimed at teenagers. Of the 250 youth theatre companies and schools taking part, Haggerston is one of just 10 selected to perform at the National Theatre itself.

Casey Powell, Head of Expressive Arts at Haggerston, said: "Connections gave our students the opportunity to take a script from page to stage. They learnt different techniques to tell a story to the audience but also the importance of the playwright in the process, a role they so often overlook."

Bridge Academy pupils Speak up at Parliament

YOUNG people from Hackney had their say on issues including gender equality, nuclear disarmament and the way outsiders view the borough during a special event at the Houses of Parliament.

The 14-strong group of Year 9 pupils from Bridge Academy, E2, visited Westminster on 8 June, as part of the 10-week Speak Up project, which is run by Hoxton-based writing charity Ministry of Stories.

Hackney's Deputy Mayor, Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, and The Speaker, Cllr Clare Potter, were among an audience of invited politicians and campaigners listening to the passionate views expressed.

The Speak Up programme promotes young people's confidence in public speaking and active citizenship.

Ahead of the event, the Bridge Academy group had spent nearly three months crafting their inspirational, and often moving, speeches with help from poet Keith Jarrett and a team of volunteer writing mentors from the Ministry of Stories.

Dr Hannah Ellison, English teacher at Bridge Academy, said: "The Speak

Up event allows students to have their voices heard on the issues that really matter to them.

"This is bolstered even more by the people from the Council and the community who come along to the event, engage with the students, and make them feel heard."

All of the Bridge Academy pupils and their teachers were treated to a behind-the-scenes tour of both the House of Commons and the House of Lords before their speeches.

taking part in Speak Up, or a similar programme next year, should contact: schools@ministryofstories.org; for more details visit: www.ministryofstories.org

A BOOK made from recycled magazines and a cabinet of curiosities are just some of the artworks currently on display in The Mind's Eye exhibition at Hackney Museum.

They have been selected from almost 3,000 works created by patients recovering from brain injuries at Homerton hospital in the past 23 years.

Its Regional Neurological Rehabilitation Unit has an art room, which opened in 1995, and is where all of the exhibition's works were created.

The unit offers art workshops to those with traumatic brain injuries following accidents or assaults as well as those who have a brain injury due to a stroke or an aneurysm.

Shaun Caton, art curator at the hospital, said: "Many patients tell me they develop skills that they can apply when they leave to their new life; practical skills such as holding objects, sustained concentration and manipulation of small implements. They also find new interest in art."

One relative and carer of a patient who uses the art room, said: "I felt all my stress about what's happened to us as a family going out of the window."

"Having this in the hospital is such an important service for patients' families."

"It helps people like us to get something back,

“It helps people like us get something back, which we lost through a horrendous accident or injury” which we have lost through a horrendous accident or injury.”

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member with responsibility for Hackney Museum, added: "Hackney is incredibly lucky to have such a unique service, which empowers patients by helping them to fully express themselves."

"It is truly inspiring to see the role that art and creativity plays in the rehabilitation of patients."

The display, which runs until 1 September, was developed in partnership with the Council-run museum and Homerton hospital, and sponsored by Bates and Irwin Mitchell solicitors.

There will be family drop-in workshops and an exhibition guided tour over the summer.

News in brief

Pets help raise patient positivity

FLORENCE Nightingale may have been the first to notice the therapeutic effect of animals on her patients, but now Homerton hospital is using specially trained dogs to help those with dementia.

The use of so-called 'assisted animals' is a growing trend in both healthcare and education, as increasing evidence points to their efficacy in supporting patients with mental health issues or dementia.

The dogs, trained by national charity Pets As Therapy, visit the hospital's Elderly Care Unit every other Monday.

Emma Higgins, Homerton's Dementia Nurse Specialist, said: "The sessions have been popular with patients, their families and not least the staff. It is a good way to start the week for many and the effects are long lasting."

Voices of new parents wanted

NEW City and Hackney parents are being encouraged to contribute their views to improve NHS maternity services as part of a residents' forum called the Maternity Voices Partnership (MVP). The City and Hackney MVP would like more mums and dads to share their views on how maternity services and post-natal support can be improved. The group includes residents and maternity professionals from Homerton hospital, a GP, and maternity organisations and community services.

The partnership is chaired by a Hackney mum and meets every two months. The views and experiences of parents are recorded and used to feed back to maternity services providers and commissioners.

Meetings take place in local baby-friendly venues at different times of the day. Parents who live across the City and Hackney and who have had children in the last three years are welcome to join the MVP. For more information e-mail: cah.maternityvoices@nhs.net

Read well and get mental health support

A NATIONAL campaign has been launched to help people experiencing mental health needs to access free support in their local libraries.

The Read Well campaign will highlight titles by The Reading Agency and Society of Chief Librarians, which will be available in Hackney Central and Dalston CLR James libraries for residents.

The 37 books are accredited by healthcare professionals and range from picture books to biographies.

Each title offers support to people with mental health needs and their carers, who are at increased risk of loneliness according to recent research.

The books available will help people read well to stay well, and include:

- 'How to Stay Alive', by Matt Haig
- 'A Manual for Heartache', by Cathy Rentzenbrink
- 'The Boy with the Topknot', by Sathnam Sanghera
- 'A Mindfulness Guide for the Frazzled', by Ruby Wax.

The list is curated with mental health experts and includes books to support people undergoing talking therapies, as well as guided and unguided self-help.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for libraries, said: "Hackney's libraries play a vital role in improving the health of local residents."

"The Reading Well

The 37 titles in the campaign will be available at a local library scheme helps bring together expertise from the health sector into the safe space of the library, helping anyone readily access free and trusted information."

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – a social enterprise restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. This is a fresh, vibrant fish curry that can be cooked in less than an hour.

Coconut fish curry with coriander rice

Serves 4

Preparation time
20 mins

Cooking time
30 mins

Ingredients

- 400g any white fish, diced
- 200ml coconut milk
- 100ml fish stock (using stock cube)
- 2 shallots, sliced
- 1 red pepper, sliced
- 1 yellow pepper, sliced
- 1 aubergine, 2cm diced
- 1 tbsp ginger, grated
- 3 cloves of garlic, crushed
- 1 stalk of lemongrass, chopped
- 2 kafir lime leaves, chopped
- 1 fennel bulb, sliced
- 1 lime, zest and juice
- ½ bunch of coriander, picked and chopped
- Stalks from ½ bunch of coriander
- 2 tbsp vegetable oil
- 200g basmati rice.

Method

- Heat a pot of water with the coriander stalks in it
- Heat the vegetable oil in a second pot; add the shallots, garlic, ginger, lemongrass and lime leaves. Sweat on a low heat for 5 mins
- Add the peppers, aubergine and fennel; fry for a further 2 mins
- Add the fish stock and coconut milk; leave to simmer, but make sure it does not reduce
- Add the basmati rice to the pot of boiling water with coriander stalks; cook the rice as per packet instructions
- While the rice is cooking, drop the fish into the curry mix; be careful not to over-mix
- Add the lime zest and juice to the curry
- Strain the rice and take out the coriander stalks
- Serve with the chopped coriander on top.

Waterhouse - through Blue Marble Training - supports young people across the borough towards careers in the restaurant industry. All young people aged six to 19 in Hackney can take part in the survey regarding services in the borough

Have your say on improving services for young people

THERE is still time to take part in Hackney's Young People's Survey 2017/2018.

Young Hackney and Hackney Youth Parliament are seeking the views of all young people aged six to 19 about the services they offer.

Information from this survey will be used to improve the services for young people in the borough.

This survey will ask about youth hubs and the current activities that they provide, the safety of young people in the borough, and Hackney Youth Parliament – including what campaigns young people would like to see about the issues that concern them.

People who take part in the survey and provide an e-mail address or contact number will be entered into a prize draw.

The prizes include a £50 voucher for those aged 12 and over, as well as prizes for under 12s.

The survey closes on 13 July. People can take part online at: bit.ly/2tkXI9B or collect a paper copy of the survey from any youth hub.

For more information call: 020 8356 6472.

Share your memories at a Hackney Archives event and create a photograph in the style of Gibson

HACKNEY Archives is hosting an open studio event on 5 July where people will be able to see many of the thousands of images taken by Ron Gibson's studio.

Most of the photographs, including studio portraits and scenes from Hackney's past, have not been seen in public before.

Attendees will be able to share their memories of Gibson, and Archives staff are inviting people to bring along their own photos from the studio. The event will also feature a pop-up studio where visitors will be able to create their own Gibson-style photograph.

Staff from Hackney Archives are also keen to hear residents' ideas as to how the Gibson collection should be shared with the wider community.

The evening will run from 6-7.30pm, at Hackney Museum, which is located next to Hackney Town Hall, on the ground floor of the Technology and Learning Centre. Tickets are free, and residents can register through Eventbrite.co.uk (search for 'Hackney Museum') or come along on the night.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Soraya Adejare.
